

THE MODERN

$2.50

BLACK and BROWN
FUR STIFF HATS are equal to any $3 and $3.50 Hats to be found anywhere else in this city. We guarantee you a saving of 25c to $1 on every Hat you buy of us.

CAMPAIGN

Take your choice of any of our Campaign Silk Handkerchiefs for 25 CENTS.

Former prices 50c, 75c and $1.

TRAVELERS' INDEX.

KANKAKEE LINE
(BIG FOUR RAILWAY)
HERE WE ARE AGAIN!
Cincinnati and return.
$2.50 ONLY.
Including admission to Exposition.
Thursday, Nov. 1, 1888. Leaving Cincinnati at 10:30 a.m. Arriving Indianapolis at 6:30 p.m. Leaving Indianapolis at 7:30 a.m. Arriving Cincinnati at 11:30 a.m. No one should miss the great Exposition at Cincinnati. It will continue until Nov. 2. The admission has been reduced to 25c. We have said many things in praise of the Exposition and it deserves all we have said. It is a wonderful display of things useful, beautiful and interesting, and we will warrant those who have not seen it that they will find it well worth the time and money they have expended on it. We have said many things in praise of the Exposition and it deserves all we have said. It is a wonderful display of things useful, beautiful and interesting, and we will warrant those who have not seen it that they will find it well worth the time and money they have expended on it.

NEW SERIAL
SUNDAY JOURNAL
By the Author of "The Luck of Roaring Camp," "Tales of the Argonauts," etc.
Bret Harte's New Story
Of Mining Life in California.

"CRESSY"

BEGINS IN THE
SUNDAY JOURNAL
NOV. 4.

"Cressy" has all the characteristic qualities of Bret Harte's early work—touching pathos, quaint humor, fresh charming descriptions and sympathetic appreciation of true manliness and womanliness even under the roughest and most uninviting exterior.

The Opening Chapters
SUNDAY JOURNAL
NOV. 4,
And Will Run for NINE WEEKS

WHEN INDICATIONS.

WEDNESDAY—Fair this morning; light rain to-night.

REBELLION

Campaign business. Also, THE WHEN'S business. You're too busy this week to "have your attention called" specially to anything. No doubt some will forget to read these. But will bet nobody will forget that THE WHEN is still there, furnishing furnishings, furnishing clothes, furnishing hats, better and cheaper than anybody.

THE WHEN

THE BREWERY SYNDICATE.

What is Said by Chicago and Milwaukee Men of the Operations of English Capitalists.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—John S. Cooke, president of the Cooke Brewery Company, when asked about the English syndicate that is reported to have been formed for the purpose of buying American breweries and carrying on business as masters, victuallers, mineral water manufacturers, hotel-keepers, wine and tobacco merchants, and to establish all other branches of business, said: "I have heard it discussed a great deal in a joking way among brewers, and we all think there is something in it. I do not think any syndicate has been formed, and do not think it would amount to anything anyway. There is enough American capital to carry on the American brewing interests, and there were such a syndicate it would not be popular with the class of people who patronize it."

"Would you sell your brewing interests to such a syndicate?"

"Most certainly, if they offered enough for it. Two Englishmen came to me a short time ago and wanted to buy me out. I do not think they were serious, and I do not think I would sell."

J. H. McAvoy, president of the McAvoy Brewing Company, said there was no doubt such a syndicate had been formed. He said he had purchased not only the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but also the Philadelphia brewery of John P. Beitz & Co., and he had heard it rumored that the Anheuser, Busch & Co. brewery, of St. Louis, and Ehrhardt's mammoth bottling establishment, of New York, were about to go under the control of the same syndicate.

He thought the object was to add better beer to the market for English capital, and to interest in England or 2 per cent.—and caused English capitalists to invest their money in American industries. They had put some money in American industries, and they were now trying to get an interest in American breweries.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 31.—When questioned about the purchase of American breweries by the English syndicate, Charles Best, secretary of the Best Brewing Company, said that he understood that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

He said that the syndicate had been formed, and that it had purchased the New York breweries of H. Claussen & Son and Flannigan, May & Co., but that he did not know of any other breweries that had been purchased.

THE THIRD-PARTY LEADERS

Statements Plainly Showing Their Political Dishonesty and Insincerity.

The Indecent and Intemperate Language of Candidate Hughes Addressed to a Well-Known Minister in Eastern Indiana.

He Would Not Vote the Republican Ticket, Even to Secure Prohibition.

The Third-Party Managers in Hamilton and Tipton Arrange a Scheme for Selling Out the Supporters of Fisk and Brooks.

RENOUNCED THE THIRD PARTY.

The Intemperate Language of Mr. Hughes Opens the Eyes of Mr. Rector.

Rev. Charles W. Rector, a minister of the United Brethren denomination, is well known in Muncie and Delaware county as a zealous, faithful man in his calling, and a gentleman of irreproachable moral. He has been recognized as an ardent Prohibitionist, but has discovered the drift of the third party toward something else than prohibition, and like the conscientious man that he is, has renounced that party and renewed his allegiance to the Republican party.

Mr. Rector is satisfied that it is his duty to state some facts to the public, that others may be informed as to the designs of the third-party leaders, and escape being entrapped by their machinations into wrong-doing, and has left with the Times the communication printed below:

"Permit me space for a few statements in your columns. I am not a politician, neither do I take much stock in political affairs. My politics in the past have been Republican, but I was well nigh gone on prohibition, so enthusiastic have I been to have the cause of ruin extinguished. But by reading prohibition papers and speeches, and having been electrified so persistently by Democrats to vote prohibition that I had already decided in my mind that although prohibition was good, it is preached by many with whom it is their chief concern to defeat the Republican party, yet I see no fault with their platform on the liquor traffic, but have decided to come to the conclusion that it is not exclusively prohibition that the leaders of the Prohibition party want."

"Last Thursday night, Oct. 25, I heard Bro. J. S. Hughes, candidate for Governor on the Prohibition ticket, speak at New Corner, Delaware county, Indiana. Among many remarks, he argued like this: 'We are voting for renascence. When we receive a sufficient vote to outnumber the Whiskey League there will be bidding for us in both parties, and of the fragments of both parties we will make a party that will go to power.'"

"The next day I met him on the train, and being somewhat confused as to how he was going to bring this matter about, I asked him if, when they [the Prohibitionists] had gotten their issue, whether they would go to one of the other parties, or the others would come to them. He said he did not know. I said, to make it a little plain: 'Brother Hughes, if the Republican party would incorporate into their platform the same principles of prohibition that the Prohibitionists have, would you Prohibitionists vote?' The answer he gave me was: 'I would see the Republicans roll in hell a thousand years before I'd vote the Republican ticket.' This went through me like a flash. A man at the head of a party, purporting to be working for the salvation of men, and to be so unmerciful toward his fellow-men, that although they endorse the very thing he preaches, he would not vote with them to save them from hell! Mr. Editor, you may put me down a Republican."

"CHARLES W. RECTOR."

TRICKING THE PROHIBITIONISTS.

A Scheme for Selling Out the Third-Party People to the Democracy.

NOBLEVILLE, Oct. 31.—The Democrats and third-party Prohibitionists of this and Tipton counties have formed a limited partnership for the mutual benefit of the leaders of Democracy, and as conclusive evidence of this, the following facts are submitted to the public: First, the Democrats have full county tickets in the field in each county, but have no nominees for State senator, and they do not intend to nominate a candidate, but the managers of the Democratic party in each county will procure election tickets to be printed, and will print on them for State Senator the name of Calvin Mailer, who has been nominated for that position by the third-party Prohibitionists, in return for which the Prohibitionists are expected to vote for Cleveland.

In furtherance of the scheme the loudest talking Prohibitionists are being sent to Cleveland for the purpose of securing a picture of Cleveland for that of Fisk in their windows. Yesterday was no day fixed upon by the Prohibitionists for a county demonstration at this place, and the Democrats came to town in large numbers to help avail the crowd and joined in the parade. J. P. St. John and Helen M. Gougar were here as the orators. St. John, in the afternoon, made a free-trade Democratic speech, denouncing the protective tariff as "robbery, robbery, stark naked and bald-headed," compelling the farmer to pay extortionate prices for the necessities of life and adding to the cost of all articles of domestic manufacture a sum equal to the tariff levied upon the foreign product who imported. At the time he was making this speech the Democratic county central committee sat in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

Following letter from the Democratic county central committee to the Democratic county central committee in council, where they could hear his speech, that they might be able to properly judge of the value of the joint demonstration and his speech. In the evening Mrs. Gougar spoke at the opera-house. Her speech consisted of bitter denunciations of the Republican party generally, and of the leading statesmen of the day in particular. Her speech was creative, and no particulars were given out. It is learned from an outside source that the clubs are political in their objects, and claim to control 16,000 votes. The two candidates for Governor have been made to pledge themselves to name a State railroad commissioner favorable to the clubs. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday at the clubs are but a tool of the railroads, offered by foreign and officials, who are paid by the railroads that they should not lose the abolition of the railroad commission and the repeal of the present stringent railroad legislation. The Brotherhood men will meet on Sunday night to decide on their probable action.

SACKVILLE WEST IS SILENT

He Sits Very Complacently in His Elegant Mansion and Declines to Talk.

His Official Life Has Terminated, and He Is Calmly Waiting Instructions from London Concerning His Future Movements.

Business of the Legation Temporarily Passes Into the Hands of Mr. Herbert.

English and Canadian Papers Speak Sarcastically of the President's Action, Attributing It to Political Necessities.

THE UNLUCKY WEST.

He Sits in Silence and Awaits Instructions from His Government.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Lord Sackville, late British minister to Washington, is sitting in the legation building to-night, dressed in his customary immaculate costume of broadcloth, cut in the conventional evening-dress style. He is smoking the same brand of cigars which he smoked on his last visit to this country, and he is as imperturbable, to all outward appearances, as ever; but the ex-minister is not communicative. He declines absolutely to say a single word on the subject of his dismissal to any newspaper man who may call upon him, and even members of the diplomatic corps get very little from him. Lord Sackville feels most keenly the unpleasant situation into which he has been thrown through his efforts to enlighten American citizens upon American political subjects. He has not recovered from the suddenness of the shock which he experienced upon the receipt of Mr. Bayard's communication yesterday, and it is not expected that he will have much to say to any one during the remainder of his stay in the capital of the United States. It was said at the legation to-day that the so-called interviews with him, which appeared in the various papers this morning, were not the results of conversations with him, and in fact he not only repudiates their text, but their sentiments. He has not yet determined when he will leave. It is supposed that he is awaiting detailed instructions from his home government, with which he is in almost constant communication. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is appointed. He is, however, entirely out of political life, and his presence in Washington is solely as a foreign visitor. Technically, he has no connection with the legation of Great Britain, and so far as any business between that legation and the State Department is concerned, he has absolutely no connection with it, but he still maintains his residence in the mansion on Connecticut avenue, and is recognized there as the host of the household. Secretary Herbert, who was lately assigned to the legation here, has become charge d'affaires ad interim, and will remain in that position until relieved by the first secretary, Mr. Edwards, or until a successor to Lord Sackville is